Undergraduate Global Research Fellowship

2020 Funding Cycle

The Halle Institute for Global Research and the Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry (FCHI) will offer approximately ten fellowships to support research outside the United States for students in any school (Arts & Sciences, Business, Nursing) doing honors theses or other types of senior capstone projects.

The Global Research Fellows Program is designed for undergraduate students in all schools, departments, and programs whose projects would benefit from conducting extensive research outside the United States. Students who are accepted to or are applying for an honors program or capstone project are eligible. Global Research Fellows will receive up to $4000 for research from the Halle Institute. They will also have access to shared office space in the Fall at the FCHI upon their return to Emory. The international research portion of the fellowship will be conducted in Summer 2020 and is followed by mandatory participation in the bi-weekly Global Fellows Research Seminar and a concluding public forum. Global Fellows are expected to participate in the vibrant research community of Emory faculty, graduate students, and visiting scholars based at the FCHI and the Halle Institute for Global Research.

Expectations:

SPRING 2020
- Attend two pre-departure orientation sessions in Spring 2020.

SUMMER 2020
- Provide WhatsApp reports on a regular basis while conducting international research and participate in creating a community with the other Fellows while abroad.
- Provide photos and a one-to-two-page narrative about the and project to be shared on the Halle and FCHI websites and on social media.

FALL 2020
- Please read the 2019 Syllabus to better understand the Fall Seminar.
- Participate in the Global Fellows Research Seminar in Fall 2020. There will be approximately eight meetings during the semester taking place on Wednesday evenings, 5:00 to 7:00pm, led by the Director of the Halle Institute for Global Research. Meetings will include discussions of works-in-progress and Fellows will be expected to submit drafts, read and provide feedback on their cohorts’ work, and participate in active sessions designed to strengthen their projects.

- Attend (as class schedule allows) the FCHI’s weekly work-in-progress seminar, discuss projects with the residential fellows, and contribute research-in-progress to the FCHI undergraduate research blog.
- Present research at public colloquium in November 2020, hosted by the Halle Institute and FCHI.

Research funds will be available for use between the end of exams in Spring 2020 and the start of class in Fall 2020. The on-campus portion of the Global Research Fellowship begins at the start of the Fall semester. Global Research Fellows must submit a completed copy of their honors thesis or capstone project to both the Halle Institute and FCHI. Sponsorship recognition for Halle and FCHI and should be included.

Application Details:

Application cover page and budget proposal worksheet

Applications must be submitted as ONE pdf to halle.global@emory.edu and include, in this order:

1. Completed cover page (use cover sheet provided)
2. Research proposal – 500 words or less
3. One to two page C.V.
4. Confirmation of acceptance or application to an honors or capstone program (an email sent to you by your department and converted to pdf)
5. Budget proposal (use worksheet provided) and supporting documents, including advisor approval.
6. Unofficial Emory transcript

A letter of recommendation from the thesis or capstone project advisor should be sent directly to halle.global@emory.edu.

Tuesday, February 4, 2020 is the deadline for the submission of applications. Awards will be announced by mid-March 2020.

For more information, please contact:

Kelly Richmond Yates, Assistant Director, Halle Institute for Global Research: Kyates2@emory.edu

http://halle.emory.edu/student-opportunities/halle-fchi-fellows.html