COLLABORATIVE RESEARCH GRANTS

Halle Institute for Global Research and University of St Andrews

Call opens: October 25, 2019

Application deadline: February 3, 2020

Application details: Guidelines

Purpose:

The Collaborative Research Grants program fosters international research broadly. Applicants from all schools and disciplines are encouraged to submit funding applications for innovative and sustainable projects built around collaborative research linking faculty from University of St Andrews and Emory University with each other. The research may take place in any country as long as it is done collaboratively. The expectation is that these initial projects will lead to longer-term collaborations, institutional and research relations, and when applicable, generate publications and/or external funding for ongoing collaboration.

Application:

The Collaborative Research Grants will fund one application (with at least two principle investigators: one from St Andrews and one from Emory) per year. Selected applications will receive up to GBP10,000 or USD13,000 from each institution. These funds must be primarily used for research (broadly defined) and may include travel and related expenses. Proposals may include hosting a seminar/conference/workshop/symposium as one line-item.

Applications from regular full-time faculty in all schools, departments, or programs are welcome and will be assessed on the basis of academic quality and impact, sustainability, innovation, relevance to the universities' strategies, and relevance to fostering international research partnerships. Priority will be given to applications that contribute to institutional impact, that encourage broad collaborations across each university, and that support activities that enable involvement of graduate and undergraduate students, with a primary focus on research. Grants should be spent within the period indicated in the project submission or, as a maximum, within 24 months of receipt of funding.

St Andrews and Emory faculty are invited to submit proposals for collaborative research projects using a common application form. Questions can be directed to Kelly Richmond Yates, Halle Institute for Global Research, Emory University, kyates2@emory.edu or Samantha Lister, University of St Andrews.

Applications for projects that align with the following St Andrews' interdisciplinary research priorities are welcome: Peace, Conflict and Security; Cultural Understanding; Evolution, Behavior and Environment; Materials for the Modern World; Health, Infectious Disease and Well-being; Sustainability.
